Jim was a lovable, Easy-going, and wonderful person, he loved his sons deeply, and everyone he worked with looked up to him for good advice and father figure. He was truly a good friend that didn't tell you no wrong. Jim loved going to gambling casinos and looking at TV programs like cowboy movies, sports, and politics. Barbecuing was his specialty. Jim loved the family reunion and contributed to anything he could because he knew family and friends were important to him. He instilled that in his family.

Jim leaves to cherish his memories: two great sons, James Williams and Jerry Williams; one brother-in-law E.B. Simmons of Detroit, Michigan; two sisters-in-law Ruby McWilliams of Memphis, Tennessee and Pearl Simmons of St. Louis, Missouri, and a host of relatives and friends.
